RUSSIANS HARASSING REAR OF OKU'S ARMY

ST. PETERSBURG, June 3.-The best informed military circles attach no importance to the reports that General Kuropatkin has detached a large force from his army at Liao-Yang and dispatched it southward to relieve Port Arthur, and it is distinctly denied that Emperor Nicholas personally orders such a movement. can be authoritatively stated that the Emperor's confidence in Kuropatkin is unshaken and his Majesty is not attempting | follows: to interfere with his line of campaign.

It is natural that General Kuropatkin will do all possible to harass General Oku's rear. The railroad has been kept open as peninsula that several thousand Russian troops may be sent down the railroad to impede the Japanese operations and inflict as much damage as possible, as these could easily be withdrawn by rail if the enemy threatened to cut the line of communications above. Even the loss of a few regiments would be considered cheap if the Japanese operations against Port Arthur were retarded for an appreciable However, it is realized that with the Japanese occupation of Port Dalny and Talien-Wan as bases for landing siege guns, the small force above Kin-Chou could accomplish but little, and it is now more likely to be withdrawn, destroying the railroad as it retires northward. For strategic purposes Kuropatkin may be trying to make the Japanese believe that a CHARGE OF INFANTICIDE | movement southward is contemplated in order to divert Kuroki's attention in that > TOKIO, June 3 .- The total of the Japanese casualties at the battle of Nan-Shan hill on May 26 is 4,304. They are divided as follows: Thirty-one officers, including one major and five sergeant majors, and 713 noncommissioned officers and men killed; 100 officers, including one colonel, one major and twelve sergeant majors, and 3,460 noncommissioned officers and men wounded.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 3.-The Russian losses in the fighting at Kin-Chou are officially stated to be thirty officers and 700 men killed or wounded. These figures were given in General Stoessel's report, which has reached the War Office. It is dated May 28. The method of its transmission to Viceroy Alexieff is not disclosed, but it is presumed it was taken by a Chinese junk to Nieu-Chwang. Evidently it was written under stress, as it was hastily penciled. The account says the attack began May 21 and culminated on the evening of May 26. | day. The real fighting was practically confined to May 25 and May 26, the Japanese remaining quiet the two previous days. General Stoessel reports that, owing to the absence of the support of warships against the Japanese artillery fire at the time of the final assault on the Russian positions on Nan-Shan hill during the evenng of May 26, he at 8 o'clock gave the order to blow up the guns and retire. The general explains that the order was only partially executed, as the enemy's flank movements necessitated promptness in retreat, which, he said, was carried out with great coolness, thus accounting for the smallness of the Russian losses. The general also says the enemy's losses mut have reached in the thousands. General Stoessel pays a high tribute to the Russian troops, and refers in terms of ficient to definitely convict them.

"The enemy's fire, particularly that from four gunboats and six torpedo boats, completely annihilated our batteries mounted at Kin-Chou. The Fifth Regiment, which was posted on this spot, stood its ground heroically. The fire of this regiment, as well as that of our batteries and the gunboat Bobroff Khounouoza, inflicted enormous losses on the Japanese. Our losses amounted to thirty officers and 800 men killed or wounded. We blew up or damaged all our guns which the Japanese had not put out of action. It would have been inexpedient certainly to bring up siege artillery during the fierce fighting. "The battle May 26 began at 5 a.

On the witness stand Johnson imagined that the counterfeit money which was found in his possession was given him by a cow through the medium of a spirit. According to his fanciful story, he was in a field where a cow was eating grass and that it handed him the money with a spirit hand. When asked if he tried to pass the valueless coin he entered a strenuous denial. It was said by Mitchell authorities yesterday that, with the exception of occasional touches of insanity, which occurred usually when he became excited, Johnson was as sane as anyone. Because of his condition the case was continued until next November.

The street car, in charge of Motorman S. E. Smith and Conductor John Bock, was be done to prevent the collision. It was said that the automobile was not displaying lights other than ordinary bicycle lamps and could not be seen in the darkness. The street car tracks were wet with the recent rain, and Motorman Smith said that on this account, together with the heavy down grade, he could not stop the car. Those who saw the accident said that when the impact ocurred the automobile
